THE PLORENCE AND KEYPORT COMPANY.—AT A mosting of the Company, held at Keyport, on Tuesday, the 9th inst, the following sixtement was read and ordered to be published. Will-lawCHALONER, Pre-lident. The Plorence and Keyport Company has its origin in the fact that New York is the great commercial emportum of America, and requires facilities for ready access from every rection of the country. The free compatition of stemahouts and railreads to the North and East has reduced the rate of travel and trained to the south of East has reduced the rate of travel and trained to the South have thus fer been prohibited by the laws of New Jersey, which has maintained the travel across the State at more than five times the cost on any of the other roads loading to New York.

The exceptions thange on this most important of all avenues is to the mass of the people, a positive prohibition, and totally exclude and shuts cut ning-tenths of the business and travel that would flow into New York from that quarter, at a price corresponding with every other chanuel.

The fare between New York and Albany is now isse than one tenth of what it was before the introduction of railroads, and the intercourse more than ten times what it then was, while the travel between New York and Philadolphis was, while the travel between New York and Philadelphia in but little increased between the price is now higher than it was when railroads were unknown—a fact without a parallel to the same rate as prevails in every other, will be altered with a corresponding increase in the amount of all routes, to the same rate as prevails in every other, will be altered with a corresponding increase in the amount of travel and with a corresponding increase in the amount of travel and withoutes contributing to the wealth and properly of the metropolis.

The time has come for the opening of this route, the trade and business of New York requires it, and the millions of people who are now denied all access to the chief city of the Union, will not see for all this additional lousiness is by steam-heat through the narywes in as straight a line as practicable, to a joint on the Jersey shore, and there by railroad in such deroute an public nocessi y may demand.

The accommodate this trade will require a more than hourly increases with the way tork, and give to the point where there roads serminate, and where this constant intercourse which was not not not proved and where this constant intercourse in maintained, a value and importance not exceeded by any location to the prince and where this constant intercourse in maintained a value and importance not exceeded by any location to the prince and the map of New Jersey and the Coast Survey will how what practical inputry hazeon frused, that there is not none point on the Rariana Bay expands of adaptation to the prince as a harbor for a large class of vessels. This peint, continuous to Keyport, has been purchased by the Florunce and Keyport Company, and is now undergoing the improvements accessary to toat its availability.

A deck and basis are in course of construction, sufficient to accommodate and furnish a safe harbor for the large class of steamboat; and good roads are belag opened, making leadered by the bounders of furnishing country in every direction, we the depot and thorough will be applicable to a vividend among the remaining shoulders.

The sale of lots at Keypert, now about to be male, is done in consequence of ammerous applications for those lying immediately contiguous to the improvements in progress, at the price fixed by the Company. It is believed they will comman do much above that rate. The excess in value properly belongs to the stockholders in common, and not to these who may chance to be the first applicants for the lots.

Horrible Rallyand Accident. EXPLOSION OF A LOCOMOTIVE-ENGINEER KILLED

Synacuse, Nov. 21-715 P. M. The morning freight train on the Syracuse and Ution Bailroad, this marning started from the East at four o'clock, drawn by two locomotives. When about threequarters of a mile from the depot, the foremost locomotive, the Achilles, exploded with terrible and disastrons consequences. The boiler exploded in the fire box. The machinery and wood work were rent asunder or demolished, and the locemotive left an almost worthless wreck. The power of the agent of this mischief may be imagined, from the fact, that the entire locomotive was lifted from the track, and carried around so as to lie directly across the second and parallel track. and the teudie direction.

Israel Morgan, the engineer, was blown into the air, and fell is the road, about one hundred and fifty feet distant. He received the full effects of the steam and heated water upon his person, as it was forced through the door of the furnace, and was undoubtedly instantly killed. Most of the clothes were tern from his body, and he was terribly scalded and burned.

Mr. Morgan had been an engineer some seven or eight years, and was considered very careful and competent. He leaves a wife and three children.

The fireman was in a more fortunate location, and al though blown some feet to the side of the road, where he was found in an insensible condition, he escaped with a severe scalding and bruising, which are not considered mortal. His name is William Caton.

The second locomotive, the Thesis, had nearly the entire machinery of one side carried away. Measrs Howard and Palmer, the engineer and fireman of this engine,

narrowly escaped injury

The probable oxuse of the explosion was high steam and low water, properatory to accomplishing the difficult grade of the road as it it leaves the city.

The report of the explosion was tremendous, and was heard at a great distance. Fragments of the locomotive were thrown hundreds of feet, and several houses on either side of the street were slightly damaged by the elsphoards breaking through, windows smashed, &c. Mr. Morgan's watch was found in a vacant lot fully two hundred feet from the scene of the disaster. It was still running, and in no way damaged, except that the crystal

The Fatal Accident in Fourth Breekt.—The corone held an inquest, on Saturday evening, at No. 673 Fourth street, upon the body of James R. Williamson, who was killed by falling from a scatfold in the early part of the day, as reported in our paper yesterday morning. It appeared from the evidence given by Jacob Lewis, Abraham C. Wood, and other residents of the house, that Mr Williamson had creeted a temporary confidd in front of a window in the second story, for the surpose of painting the shutters. At about half-past one o'clock in the afterneon he had mounted upon the last round of a chair, when the entire structure gave way with a great crash, precipitating him into a gress plot in the yard undernoath. He died in about five minutes. The jury rendered a vertical in accordance with the ovidence. Mr. Williamson was a native of New York, aged sixty four years.
